

The Computer Game

A brand new computer shop opened its doors for the first time on 18th November at 29 Dalry Road. The Haymarket Computer Shop is the brainchild of three young men who together have amassed a wealth of experience from their very different backgrounds. They are Gary Galbraith, Gerry Parker and Mark Stewart.

Gary is a lecturer in Computer Science at Telford College and has a very wide experience of life through the police force, the navy and a number of other jobs.

He originally set up the new business because he wanted to develop training courses for small businesses, the aim being to offer a complete solution for clients from first contact right through to the supply of equipment and training.

KNOWLEDGE

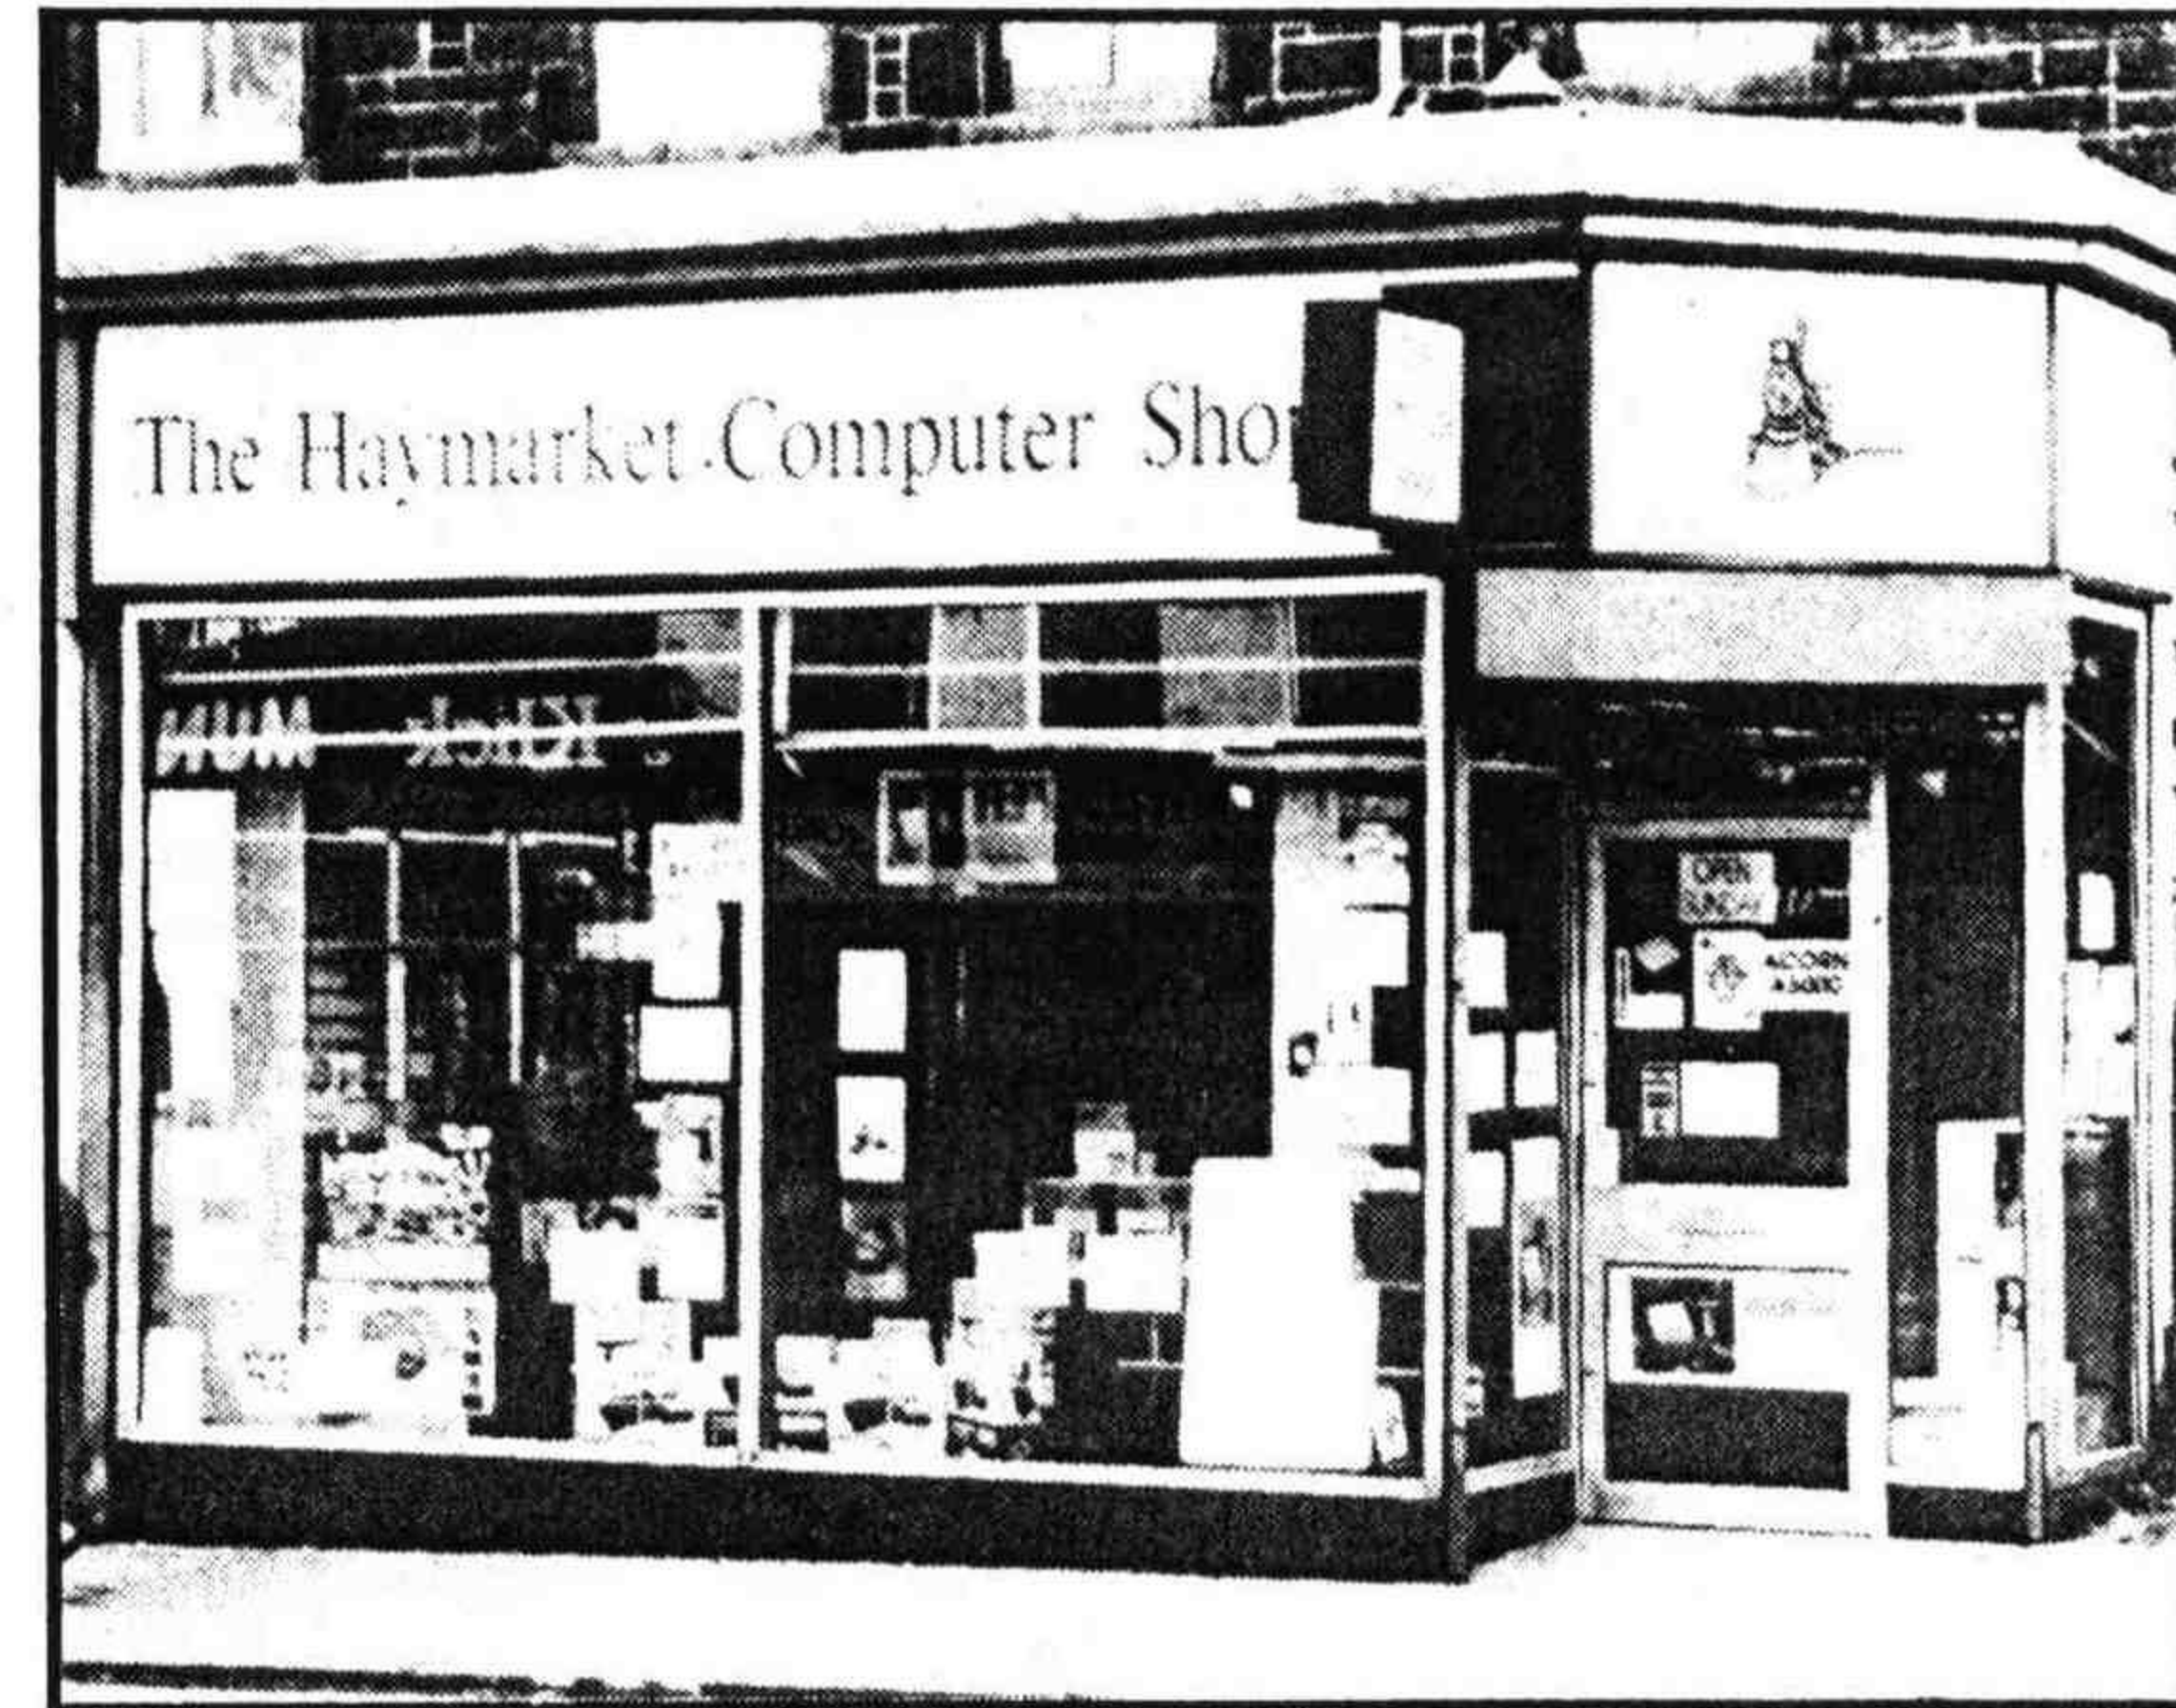

Gerry spent seven years as the sales manager at Silicon Centre building up a wide knowledge of home and business computers and was approached by Gary earlier this year to help in the selling side of the masterplan.

The partnership was officially formed in June, when it began to trade in a small way.

SPARK

The third partner - Mark, a chartered accountant with a background in banking - came into the picture in October after parting company with Edinburgh Crystal. This provided the financial spark which led to the shop opening within a remarkably short space of time.

In the run up to Christmas

The new shop at 29 Dalry Road

the emphasis will be on entertainment, with an exciting range of equipment on offer from Atari, Commodore, Sega and many more.

CONSULTANCY

However, the longer term aim is to develop a broad based company which will not only supply computers, but also provide a first class consultancy and training service for everyone from home and small business users to large corporate users.

It is the firm intention of the three young entrepreneurs to offer a wider range of computer related services than any other computer business in town.

The shop stocks a wide range of equipment for business and entertainment use.
